4. The effect produced on the mind by travelling depends entirely on the mind of the traveler and on the way in which he conducts himself. The chief idea of one very common type of traveler is to see as many objects of interest as he possibly can. If he can only after his return home say that he has seen such and such temple, castle, picture gallery, or museum, he is perfectly satisfied. Far different is the effect of travels upon those who leave their country with minds prepared by culture to feel intelligent admiration for all the beauties of nature and art to be found in foreign lands. When they visit a new place, instead of hurrying from temple to museum to picture gallery, they allow the spirit of the place to sink into their minds, and only visit such monuments as the time they have at their disposal allows them to contemplate without irreverent haste. It can be inferred from the given passage that (1 Point)

- ☐ A. The writer prefers the second type of traveler.
- ☐ B. The first type of traveler is the lay traveler who does not understand the worth of any place he travels to.
- ☒ C. The objective of the second type of traveler is not to see much, but to see well.
- ☐ D. None of the above
